Archdiocesan Commission for the Pastoral Care of Migrants and Itinerant People

Welcome | Protect | Integrate | Enrich

Who We Are

The Archdiocesan Commission for the Pastoral Care of Migrants and Itinerant People (ACMI) serves all migrants in Singapore, especially the underprivileged and those needing support, through welcoming, protecting, enriching and integrating them into our community – regardless of nationality, race, or religion.

ACMI is an organisation established by the Catholic Church in 1998. ACMI's charitable works are carried out through the ACMI Migrant Fund which is a registered charity under the Charities Act since 2016 and is approved as an Institution of a Public Character (IPC).

Our Services

We provide a range of services that meet the needs of migrants. They include skills development, outreach and engagement, assistance and well-being, and pastoral and formation.

Skills Development

ACMI runs vocational and language courses that help migrants, largely Migrant Domestic Workers (MDWs), improve and expand their skillsets holistically. These 4-month long courses aim to equip them with practical skills that can be applied in everyday life or cultivate an interest that they may not have had the time to pursue.

There are two intakes for weekend classes annually – in January and July and two intakes for weekday classes. Courses are currently running at Agape Village and Church of St Bernadette.

ACMI also collaborates with other organisations and institutions to run educational and creative workshops for MDWs at parishes like the Church of St Bernadette as well as at Agape Village.

For more information on Skills Development, call +65 8600 3583 (Closed on Fridays, Saturdays & Public Holidays) or email acmi.sd@catholic.org.sg.

Outreach and Engagement

ACMI brings the local and migrant communities together by reaching out to migrant workers through various initiatives, allowing them to interact and integrate with the local community, form bonds in the process and promote cross-cultural learning.

We develop purposeful programmes like learning journeys where both the local and migrant communities can visit each other's places of study, work or play to gain better insight into each other's lives.

Our other initiatives include reaching out to migrant workers in dormitories, distributing daily necessities and hot meals, and bringing migrants to places of interest.

For enquiries on collaboration, please email us at acmi.outreach@catholic.org.sg.

Assistance and Well-being

ACMI provides support for migrant families, transnational families consisting of one Singaporean spouse and one foreign spouse, and individuals in areas such as case management and counselling, information and referral services, legal aid, and education amongst many others to ensure that their dignity, safety and security are always protected.

With the ACMI migrant helpline, our team addresses each case and provides dedicated support for each individual.

ACMI also helps to empower non-Singaporean children from low-income transnational families through education sponsorship.

For more information, please email us at acmi.assistance@catholic.org.sg or call our migrant helpline at +65 9188 9162.

Pastoral and Formation

Guided by our Catholic Social Teaching, ACMI spreads the love of God through providing a safe space and promoting holistic care for our migrant beneficiaries through human, values, social, psycho-emotional, moral and spiritual formation.

Migrants are invited to encounter the love of God through our programmes and activities including workshops, talks, retreats, liturgical gatherings and fellowships, in collaboration with different partners and collaborators.

We also offer pastoral care and support, as well as Masses and the Sacrament of Reconciliation.

For more information, please email us at acmi.pastoral@catholic.org.sg.

Bringing migrant support to the heartlands

ACMI aims to bring services including skills development courses, wellness workshops, counselling and case management to where migrants are through our new centres, starting with ACMI*connect* @ Zion located at the Church of St Bernadette.

With our main office located at Agape Village in Toa Payoh, ACMI aims to have several more locations across the island to connect support and services to more people in need of them.

ACMI hopes that migrants can call these centres a safe place where they can seek support, build community, learn, and upskill.

Migrants can call our migrant helpline at +65 9188 9162 or email us at acmi.assistance@catholic.org.sg for support and our team will advise further.
